The problem

Challenges around certain activities such as eating, staying hydrated, moving around, reading and sleeping can be exacerbated if the environmental triggers, like light levels, don't support the activity.

The solution

By placing a light in a strategic position, perhaps focusing on specific objects or areas of the room, you can create a more enabling environment that is conducive to well being. Illuminating a healthy bowl of fruit, or leaving a book on a coffee table and providing the adequate lighting, can encourage an active and healthy lifestyle. When the light is off, the dimmer switch glows in the dark, allowing you to identify it with ease and control by foot.
